In this workshop, Charlie will draw upon his experience as a professional Locations Scout & Manager in the New Orleans Film Industry for over the past decade. Location scouting is a critical process in the pre-production stage of filmmaking and commercial photography where the scout searches for a suitable place or "location" to film scenes outside of the studio. Topics discussed will include: how & what to document as a locations scout, developing & maintaining relationships with locations owners, cooperating with municipalities and governing agencies, major pit-falls, tips for success, and many wild stories from behind the scenes on some amazing pieces of cinema and television!
